Exhibition & Partnership Prospectus

Invitation to Attend

Dear Colleagues

The 33rd Congress of the International Council of the Aeronautical Sciences (ICAS) will be held in Sweden, at Stockholm Waterfront Congress Centre 4-9 September 2022, hosted by the Swedish aerospace community.

ICAS was established in 1957 as a non-government, non-profit scientific organisation with the mission to advance knowledge and facilitate collaboration in aeronautics. Today ICAS brings together around 30 countries from five continents.

One of the most essential activities of ICAS is the organisation of biennial international congress. Since the first ICAS congress in Madrid 1958, it has grown to become the world's pre-eminent forum for aeronautical technology which attracts well-known specialists and leaders of top aerospace research centres, companies and universities. Up-to-date scientific achievements in aeronautics and priority projects to design new generation aircraft and engines, constitute important topics of the congress and reflect the aspirations of the aeronautical community.

We expect that the ICAS 2022 Congress in Stockholm will attract an unprecedented number of papers and more than 800 delegates from at least 40 countries.

Support from government and private organisations is crucial to guarantee a world class scientific, business, and cultural agenda, and to provide an exciting program for young participants.

The Congress is a unique opportunity for companies to showcase their support for one of the most research-intensive industries and their readiness to invest in the world's intellectual potential as well as demonstrate to the audience their professional capabilities and resources.

Let us invite you to participate in this important scientific and technical event for aeronautics and to become an exhibitor or partner. The attached prospectus contains details about various exhibitor and partnership programs.

We look forward to welcoming you to ICAS 2022 in Stockholm.

About the Congress

The 33rd Congress of the International Council of the Aeronautical Sciences (ICAS 2022) will be held on 4-9 September 2022 at the Stockholm Waterfront Congress Centre, Stockholm, Sweden.

The ICAS congress is a biennial six-day event which brings together world's aeronautics experts and the entire international scientific aerospace community to discuss, understand and compare worldwide scientific and technological advances. The Congress provides the ideal opportunity to move aeronautical research and technology progressively forward, particularly with regards to the environment and sustainable development.

Up-to-date scientific achievements in aeronautics and priority projects to design new generation aircraft and engines, constitute essential topics of the Congress and reflect the aspirations of the aeronautical community. In addition to core aeronautical disciplines such as Aircraft Design, Materials and Structures, System and Subsystems, it also addresses emerging technologies that lead to improved performance, a cleaner or quieter environment or more agile development processes.

The Congress will attract leading aviation experts, engineers, scientist and Ph.D. students from all over the world.

About ICAS

The International Council of the Aeronautical Sciences is an international, nongovernment, non-profit scientific organisation with the mission to advance knowledge and facilitate collaboration in aeronautics. Established in 1957, ICAS is the only international support organisation to represent engineering professional societies and their members. Currently ICAS has Member Societies from 27 countries and in addition 36 Associate Members from all sectors of the aerospace industry, which are dedicated to the advancement of aeronautics and aimed to encourage international dialogue relevant to aeronautical research and technology.

ICAS biennial international congress covers all aspects of aeronautical science and technology and their application to both military and civil aviation. Held in September of even-numbered years in an aeronautically relevant venue, the congress attracts an increasing number of delegates and papers at each new edition. The congress attendees get the opportunity to:

- Present their work to an informed and truly global audience.
- Hear the latest developments from internationally recognised experts.
- Exchange information and opinions with colleagues from around the world.
- Develop collaborative relationships.
- Build long lasting friendships and networks with colleagues in other countries and cultures

All papers presented at the congress are included in an electronic publication available for the participants.

ICAS membership is open to all countries and provides a forum for industry players to discuss common problems in aeronautical science, research and technology. For more information, please visit: www.icas.org
